KOHSAMUI

Koh Samui is a world-renowned island situated in the Gulf of Thailand, 84 km to the east of Surat Thani. It covers an area of 247 sq.km. The road around the island is 52 km. long. The best time for a visit is from January to May when the sea is calm. A long coastal line fringed with coconut trees together with the crystal-clear sea attracts visitors to make countless revisits. The natural beauty the island has to offer along with the natural comfort is combined with art and culture creating a unique paradise for visitors year round. Koh Samui's nature, culture, and art not only create the ideal atmosphere for tourists but are also the foundation of many other communities on the island.

LAMAI

Lamai beach is another famous beach with a beautiful curved bay and coconut trees lining the beach. Some of the beach has quite deep water and is another area for swimmers to exercise caution in. Lamai is similar to Chaweng Beach in the sense that it is popular with tourists and some areas of the beach are almost as crowded in terms of people, accommodation, restaurants and entertainment as Chaweng beach. One of the famous spot in Lamai beach is Hin Ta Hin Yai or grandmother and grandfather's rock. These amazing rock formations of Hin Ta and Hin Yai are on Koh Samui's south coast, where many years ago, a group of locals made the discovery. The rocks are well known for resembling the male and female genitalia.

Around Lamai

NaMuangWaterfall

Na Muang waterfalls are set in lush jungle surroundings and are easily accessible just off the main ring road Route 4169 about halfway between Nathon and Lamai Beach. Visitors with a reasonable level of physical fitness will be able to reach the falls on foot.

The paths leading to the falls can be steep or slippery in places so when visiting be sure to wear sturdy footwear and take care when walking. Though access to the waterfalls is free there is plenty along the way to spend your money on, including several stalls selling snacks and souvenirs and offers of a guided tour of the area.

Between Na Muang 1 and 2 is the Na Muang Safari Park which features elephant rides as well as monkey shows and other entertainment that kids especially will enjoy. An entire day could be spent at the falls swimming, hiking, exploring, picnicking – a cool and peaceful alternative to the beach.

GuanYu ChineseShrine

Another true must see destination on Koh Samui is the Guan Yu Chinese shrine. The shrine is a 16-metre tall bronze statue of Guan Yu. Guan Yu has been granted god-like status over the centuries, and his life stories have largely been fictionalized through books such as the historical novel, Romance of the Three Kingdoms. Guan Yu now represents loyalty, righteousness, and honesty among the Chinese people.

Grandfather & Grandmother Rocks

The Hin Ta Hin Yai legend is a tale of tragedy tinged with hope, as described on a signboard near the rocks: "A folklore of Samui island tells the story of an old couple by the name of Ta Krenng (Grandpa Krenng) and Yai Riem (Grandma Riem) who lived with their son in the southern province of Nakhon Si Thammarat. Since their son had come of age, they felt that it was time he got married. They set their sights on a union with the daughter of Ta Monglaai, who lived in neighboring province of Prachuap Khiri Khan, about 400 kilometers to the north. One day they decided to set off by boat to press their suit. During their sea journey, the boat was seized by a storm just off Lamai bay, Koh Samui. The old man and his wife were unable to swim ashore. They died at sea, turning into rocks as proof to the would-be bride's parents of their true intentions. The rocks stand there to this day"

Laem Sor Pagoda

The Chedi Laem Sor was built by beloved Luang Por Dang, who passed away on a sunken ship in 2519. The pagoda is decorated with golden tiles and inside it contains Buddha's relics. The Laem Sor Pagoda is located between Taling Ngam District and Na Mueng District.

A young girl in a blue and white patterned bikini is walking on a sandy beach, stepping into the shallow turquoise water. The water has gentle waves. In the foreground, dark, silhouetted leaves of a tree hang down from the top of the frame. The sky is bright and clear.
